PALLIATIVE CARE RESOURCE GUIDE

“Palliative care services are helpful, not only at end of life, but also at earlier stages in the illness.”

PALLIATIVE CARE is appropriate for patients who have received any diagnosis that will shorten life expectancy. Palliative care services are helpful, not only at end of life, but also at earlier stages in the illness.

Palliative care providers can focus on controlling pain and other symptoms, ensure adequate home support, assist with grief support, and educate and advocate for patients and families as needed. Research has shown that early integration of palliative care can improve a patient’s quality of life.

COMMUNITY & HOME SERVICES

PARAMEDICS PROVIDING PALLIATIVE CARE PROGRAM

In this program, trained paramedics are able to provide care to patients within their home when they are having an emergency associated with their condition, such as pain or symptom control.

The goal of the program is to support people living with life limiting conditions by providing the care they need at any time, day or night, and to assist them to remain comfortable at home, if this is what they wish, for as long as possible. The program is operational in the St. John's metro, with plans for expansion to other regions in 2021. Please call (709) 777-4605 for information.

Paramedics, Community Nurses and Social Workers assist patients in receiving care at home for as long as possible.

COMMUNITY SUPPORT PROGRAM

The Community Support Program provides palliative care services in both the home and community clinic setting. Once eligible for palliative care, the individual can access services at home from community care nurses and social workers who can help provide relief from disease symptoms such as pain, nausea or stress and improve quality of life.

AT-HOME END OF LIFE CARE

When an individual has reached the final stages of their life, the Community Support Program offers additional services to provide comfort and support to the patient and their family in their own home.

End of life care at home is available across the Eastern Health region and includes a number of services, such as:

- Home visits
- Symptom treatment
- Equipment and other supplies
- Personal care
- Household management needs
- Respite for the main caregiver
- Medications

WESTERN HEALTH

REGIONAL INTEGRATED HEALTH AUTHORITY

Western Health believes in and supports an integrated approach to palliative care. An approach that focuses on a person's and family's physical, psychosocial, and spiritual needs at all stages of a chronic illness or frailty. Palliative care strives in promoting comfort rather than attempting to cure. It can be provided at a setting of one's choice – home, hospital, personal care home, or long term care.

PALLIATIVE AND END OF LIFE CARE

Regional Palliative Care Services are part of the Rehabilitation, Continuing Care and Palliative Care Program of Western Health.

OUTPATIENT SERVICES

Services are available to anyone within the Western Health region who has obtained a referral to the specialist palliative care team from their health-care provider. Services include pain and symptom management, goals of care discussions, and grief and bereavement.

INPATIENT SERVICES

There is a Palliative Care Unit located at Western Long Term Care Home. It has eight beds – six private rooms and one semi-private, a family room, a kitchenette and a private outdoor space.

There are also eight palliative care beds throughout the region:

- Sir Thomas Roddick Hospital (4 beds)
- Bay St. George Long Term Care (1 bed)

- Bonne Bay Health Centre (1 bed)
- Calder Health Centre (1 bed)
- Charles Legrow Health Centre (1 bed)

The specialist palliative care team also provides a consult service to inpatients of Western Memorial Hospital, Western Health Long Term Care Home, Corner Brook Long Term Care, and the regional Cancer Centre.

COMMUNITY BASED SERVICES

Palliative Care is provided to individuals of any age who are house-bound, and have a life-limiting or life-threatening illness. The focus of palliative care is to address symptoms, and concerns that impact the person's quality of life. It is delivered by a health care team and can include:

- Relief of pain and other symptoms causing discomfort
- Advance care planning/goals of care discussions
- Support for family and informal caregivers
- Support of cultural needs
- Support for emotional, social and spiritual needs
- Counselling and grief support.

Palliative care is not only for the end stage or last days of an illness. People can benefit from a palliative care approach at the diagnosis of a life limiting or life threatening illness.

END OF LIFE AT HOME

In the Western Region, palliative and end of life care services are also available for people who wish to stay at home.

End of Life Care is the part of palliative care that is provided to clients in their last 8 weeks of life. It is an enhanced service in which the health care team works together to manage the illness, improve comfort, and enable the person to stay at home for as long as possible or to die at home if that is their wish. Services can include:

- Home support
- Equipment such as hospital bed, commode, and home oxygen
- Coverage for the cost of approved medications
- Coordination of care by a nurse case manager
- Education and support for the individual and family throughout the dying process.

ADDITIONAL SUPPORT SERVICES

MAID - Medical Assistance in Dying

Medical assistance in dying became legal in June 2016 and is governed under federal law. It is the administering by a doctor or nurse practitioner of a substance to a patient, at their request, that causes their death or, the prescribing or provision by a doctor or nurse practitioner of a substance to a patient, at their request, so that they may self-administer the substance and in doing so cause their own death.

Although MAID is not offered by the palliative care team, it can be part of end of life discussions. A patient can request information about MAID from any member of their health care team. A referral to the palliative care team is not needed for a patient who is interest in having a discussion surrounding MAID.
